Dear Sponsors:

The Asian Gang Investigators' Association of California (AGIAC) will be celebrating their 21st Anniversary (1989-2010), since the inception of the association. AGIAC has elected to host its conference in the City of Anaheim. "2010 International Terrorism and Organized Crime Conference" with the central theme of "United Front" will be presented by nationally recognized experts in Terrorism and Organized Crime investigations. The conference venue will be at the Disneyland Hotel, Anaheim, California and held on August 2-6, 2010. The conference will provide networking, training, and education on combating and preventing the rise of terrorism, organized crime, and street gangs. We are anticipating 500-800 attendees from over 20 different countries and the 50 local states attending this conference.

The Asian Gang Investigators' Association of California (AGIAC) (www.agiac.com) was founded in 1989 as a non-profit organization to foster relationships and networking among the various investigative units working Asian crime and gangs throughout California. Over the years, AGIAC has grown to include members across the nation and internationally. Membership is limited to law enforcement personnel, including corrections, prosecutors, parole, and probation. AGIAC interacts with other law enforcement organizations across the country to assist in a coordinated strategy on investigating and prosecuting organized crime, Asian gangs, terrorism, and as a forum for training, and development of the exchange of critical information involving Asian criminal enterprises. Since the 9-11 incidents in New York City, our association AGIAC has strived to better serve the needs of the law enforcement community by providing quality training in Terrorism and Organized Crime that will equip and assist law enforcement in combating this proliferating crime trend in a proficient and professional manner.

It is the intention of the conference planners that this conference also serve as an opportunity for networking and exchanging of information in order to assist the Law Enforcement Community in better combating the rise of terrorism and organized crime. The information presented in these training courses present the latest in investigative techniques and strategies, which we are confident, will further inspire more effective responses to the threats around us.

We invite all companies to participate as a sponsor of this event. As you well know from our conferences in previous years, this annual event has been extremely well-received and well-attended. The quality of the instructors and their instructional courses makes this conference an ideal venue as the primary training conference on Terrorism, Organized Crime, and for networking and sharing information for all law enforcement agencies and private entities.

Each year, numerous companies have donated monetary funds to our conference, which has assisted our conference committee with help in off setting the cost of expenditures, (ex: food, beverage, training materials, speakers, and etc).
